Marcelo Hugo Tinelli was born on April 1st, 1960 in Bolivar, Buenos Aires Province. He is an Argentine T.V. host and businessman.

After his father's death in 1971 Marcelo's family moved from Bolivar to Buenos Aires. When he was a teenager he spent time between school classes, playing football and working on Radio Rivadavia as a sport journalist.

He met María Soledad Aquino, who became his first wife on May 29, 1986. They had two daughters, Micaela and María Candelaria.

In 1990, after several years as a sports commentator, he created "Videomatch", later known as "Show de Video Match", which showed sport bloopers. Then the show was extended to other sections such as hidden cameras and music performances, and became the favourite of the Argentinean and Latin American audiences. Next, Marcelo started "Ritmo de la noche" (1991) a midnight show which had reasonable success. In 1997 he got a "Martín Fierro" for his programme.

He divorced and married Paula Robles on November 1997 and had two more children: Francisco and Juana.

In 2006, Tinelli started working on channel 13, which is Telefé's largest competitor. The show changed from Videomatch to Showmatch since Videomatch's name was owned by Telefé. Many people in Uruguay watch his latest success which has made him a millionaire.
